Testing the first-order separability hypothesis for spatiotemporal point patterns through the integration of MNAR mechanisms

Speaker:
Adriana Uquillas

Abstract:
The evaluation of spatiotemporal separability in ecological point processes faces critical challenges when missing data follow MNAR (Missing Not at Random) patterns.By ignoring the systematic biases inherent in conservation sampling, the inference about biological and anthropogenic interactions is compromised.